Michael J. Bosse, MD graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1974. He completed medical school at the University of Maryland and received his training in Orthopaedic Surgery at the Naval Hospital, San Diego, CA. Dr Bosse became the first formal military orthopaedic trauma surgeon after completing a Trauma Fellowship at the Baltimore Shock Trauma Center in 1984. He was then assigned as the Orthopaedic Trauma Surgeon to the Naval Hospitals in Portsmouth, Virginia and Bethesda, Maryland.

Prior to transitioning to the US Navy Reserve Forces, Dr Bosse served as the Chief of Orthopaedic Surgery on the Hospital Ship Comfort during Desert Storm. He retired from the Navy in 1996 as a Captain. Dr Bosse was awarded the Brian Allgood Military Orthopaedic Leadership Award by the Society of Military Orthopaedic Surgeons in 2014.

At present, Dr Bosse is a Emeritus Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery at Atrium Health, Musculoskeletal Institute in Charlotte, North Carolina. He is a Past President of the Orthopaedic Trauma Association and is the Emeritus Chair of the Major Extremity Trauma Research Consortium (METRC.org).

Dr Bosse’s academic interests include all aspects of the care of the multiply injured patient with emphasis on outcomes studies. He has published over 200 research articles on trauma related topics. Research investigating outcomes following severe lower extremity injury (limb salvage v. amputation – The LEAP Study) received the Kappa Delta Award from the AAOS in 2003.
